ADOPTION IS A SERIOUS BUSINESS

You undoubtedly have given the matter of adoption much thought and realize that you are seeking to assume a new role - that of parenthood. The child, however, is not able to control his situation and select his future parents. Considered as a serious business, adoption is a decision that should be made with care and thought.

Adoption is a serious business
and should be handled as such.
It is a decision that should
be made with care and thought.

From "Essentials of Adoption Law and Procedures," published by
U. S. Children's Bureau,
Washington, D. C. 1949

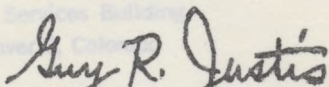

Dear Adoptive Parents:

This pamphlet has been prepared to help you decide whether you wish to adopt a child. Such a decision is one of the most important that you will make in your married life. This booklet points out what some of your responsibilities will be as parents. It will also assist you in determining what are good adoption practices, why it is desirable to go to a social agency, and why a social study of your home will be made.

Sincerely yours,

ADOPTION IS A SERIOUS BUSINESS

You undoubtedly have given the matter of adoption much thought and realize that you are seeking to assume a new role - that of parenthood. The child, however, is not able to control his situation and select his future parents. Therefore, all the safeguards that society can offer must be placed around him.

The CHILD must be protected* - from unnecessary separation from parents who might give him a good home and loving care if sufficient help and guidance were available;

from adoption by people unfit to have responsibility for the care, rearing, and training of a child;

from interference by natural parents long after the child has been happily established in his adoptive home.

The NATURAL PARENTS must be protected - from hurried decisions made under strain and anxiety to give up their child.

* From "Essentials of Adoption Laws and Procedures", published by U.S. Children's Bureau, Washington, D.C. 1949

The ADOPTING PARENTS must be protected-from taking responsibility for children about whose heredity or physical or mental capacity they know nothing;

from later disturbance of their relationship to the child by natural parents whose legal rights have not been fully protected.

WHY DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A CHILD?

Give this question your most serious thought. Weigh everything; take stock of what you will have to give up and how much it will cost you in time, money and effort.

The reasons for adoption are many and varied. Motives are often mixtures of emotions and well-thought-out reasons. The greatest number of applications come from childless couples who hope to have richer and fuller lives by bringing a child into a home. Interest in a particular child is another reason. Parents who cannot have a second child may wish, through adoption, to provide companionship for an only child. The success of this sort of placement depends upon the parents' ability to be impartial, to feel equal affection toward both children, and their natural child's ability to accept a newcomer. It is usually hazardous for parents to try to replace through adoption a child they have lost. Remember that a child is a person; he has needs of his own and he has rights!

WHO IS THE CHILD YOU WISH TO ADOPT?

The majority of children placed for adoption are born out of wedlock. While some unmarried mothers keep their babies, more relinquish them for adoption. The youth of the mother, the failure of relatives to assist in caring for the baby, or fear of social ostracism forces her to this decision.

Early placement of the baby in an adoptive home is desirable.

However, it is often necessary to delay placement until the child's general condition and rate of development can be determined.

Lack of information about the father of the baby, lack of prenatal care, birth injury - to mention only a few - are reasons why babies are observed before they are given to adoptive parents.

Sometimes children born to married couples are eligible for adoption because of death, desertion, or neglect on the part of the parents. This may result in the child's removal from the home by court action.

WHERE CAN YOU FIND HIM?

It is perfectly natural for prospective parents to want a child who will "fit". It is essential, therefore, that they apply to a child-placing agency of recognized standing.* A good child-placing agency has watched the development of a child and uses child specialists in medicine and psychology to fully understand him. The agency also knows all the facts that can be found about the parents.

* See page 8 for list of approved adoption agencies.

You will want to know, and the agency can tell you, about the parents: their health, education, what kind of work they do, what interests or skills they have and what sort of people they are. You will want to know about the child's other relatives. The agency will not keep you in the dark about anything you ought to know even if it is a count against the child, but they will not tell you who the real parents are or where they live, nor will they tell the real parents who you are or where you live.

An agency makes sure whenever possible that the child's own parents never know the names of his adoptive parents and that the adoptive parents do not know the names of the real parents or where they live.

If such an agency helps you in your adoption, you will be sure of the following:

Information on the child and his background will be given to you;

The child will suit your type of family;

What you tell the social worker is just between yourselves.

WHAT KIND OF HOME DOES THE CHILD WANT?

The greatest need of every child is for a home in which there is a mother and a father and in which he may have the benefits of family life with its background of affection and understanding. He must also be wanted and have a real sense of belonging.

It is essential that both husband and wife agree upon the plan for taking a child into their home. Unless such an agreement exists, discord is bound to arise, and the adoption may result in future unhappiness for both the child and the adoptive parents.

Age of adoptive parents may affect their ability to give sympathetic guidance to a child, especially as he grows older. Reasonable economic security should be assured to provide proper living conditions, a desirable neighborhood and educational opportunities. The standard of living should be such that the child will have good diet, satisfactory sleeping conditions, and proper medical care. The physical condition of the parents should be sound.

WHY STUDY AN ADOPTIVE HOME?

In the infant or young child for whom adoption is planned, we have a small person who cannot speak for himself; the natural parent can speak out as well as the adoptive parents, but the one whose future is being determined can say nothing about it. The agency thinks and speaks for this small citizen.

It is the agency's responsibility to choose homes in which children will have the best opportunity for sound physical, mental and emotional development. When a child is ready for adoption, the home selected for him from the list of approved homes will be the one that is best suited to him--in terms of his background, personality, and special needs.

WHY COURT ACTION IN ADOPTION?

Only by court action can the child, the natural parents, and the adoptive parents get sure protection. Only court action can make adoption legal. Adoption agencies know the importance of correct legal procedure to safeguard those involved.
